Re: Nevada U.S. Senate

Adam Laxalt leads Catherine Cortez Masto by a significant margin in a hypothetical match up for the 2022 Nevada U.S. Senate Election.

In a poll conducted by VCreek/AMG likely voters in Nevada were asked-- “Thinking about the 2022 U-S Senate elections in Nevada, in a hypothetical match-up, who would you be more likely to vote for? The current Democrat U-S Senator, Catherine Cortez Masto OR Republican, former Nevada Attorney General, Adam Laxalt? Or, are you not sure?”

The results were 42% for Laxalt, 32% for Cortez Masto, 25% Not Sure and 1% Refused to answer.

The Poll found Laxalt is winning the “Purple” voters who model as Independent/Moderate. Neither candidate has completely solidified their base. Cortez Masto’s base has a large share of voters who are Not Sure.

In the same poll, 73% of Nevada voters said they think election security to prevent voter fraud is very important and 59% are in favor of keeping the U.S. Senate’s 60 vote rule to advance laws.

Methodology:

- CI = 4.11
- August 9-14, 2021
- N= 567 Completed Surveys via Live Calls to Cell and Land Lines were able to be joined back to the database of voters for weighting and stratification by proprietary voter model score based on correlations of consumer behavior.
- ABOUT: VCreek/AMG has conducted Polling, Data Analysis and Research for political clients ranging from Federal and Statewide campaigns to municipal and legislative campaigns as well as corporations, public policy groups and political action committees since 2012. VCreek/AMG's Principal, JD Johannes, has twenty-three years of experience in campaign management, campaign consulting and advertising in campaigns across the U.S. VCreek's most recent public statewide U.S. Senate Pre-Election Poll accurately captured Republican Roger Marshall taking the lead in Kansas' Senate election.
